

Dr Kelly
Hankins

Dr Kelly Hankins, MD FRANZCOG FACOG, offers a range of tailored gynaecologic and obstetric services. This may include medical management, analgesia, physiotherapy, and/or surgery, depending on clinical symptoms and shared goals for treatment. She also offers minimally-invasive surgical treatment for many gynaecologic conditions, including laparoscopic hysterectomy.

Dr Kelly Hankins has over 12 years of experience in women's health. She completed her basic obstetrics and gynaecology training in the United States, where she had the privilege of learning from internationally renowned obstetricians and gynaecologic surgeons. After settling in Australia, she gained further experience on the North Shore and in Western Sydney before joining the Central Coast Local Health District as a specialist in 2014. Dr Hankins currently holds a public appointment, working as the clinical lead of the birthing unit at Gosford Hospital as well as in the role of RANZCOG training supervisor. Dr Hankins also has global women's health experience as a volunteer surgeon treating women with pelvic organ prolapse in Nepal.
